FOOT-BALL DOPE

Our Little Colonels Win Game
From the Mighty Clay in Enemies' Territory

"Ah, broken is the golden bowl! the spirit flown forever! Let the bell toll!—a saintly soul floats on the Stygian river. Come, let the burial rite be read—the funeral song be sung: A dirge for her the doubly dead in that she died so young."

The Blue and White completed successfully their last invasion in C. I. A. circles last Saturday. Clay the mighty, Clay the boastful, Clay the magnificent succumbed to the entrancing manoeuvres of Marion's squad of "real tough looking" football players. The score was 18 to 6. The story of the game brings every member of the Marion team to the front, places where the Blue and White had heretofore been weak having been much strengthened greatly. The only stars that Clay could call her own were the ones she saw when she bumped her head against the realization that she had been beaten—and by lowly Marion, the ideal!!!

After a conference between captains in which goals were chosen and an agreement not to kick goals after touchdowns was entered into, gum was passed around and the brotherly affair was on. Marion marched down the field to a touchdown and, remembering the agreement as to goals from touchdown, missed said goal and the score stood Marion 6, Clay (x-y)0.

Clay soon attempted the famous Popocatepetl pass in which the center after correctly solving the equation as stated by the quarter, passed the old football through the fourth dimension and suspended it out of sight in his immediate rear. This action in suspending the old pigskin in the aforesaid location while the center was in such an uncomfortable position on the line of scrimmage created an awkward situation. "Chief" Hina and John Oliver relieved the situation by rudely upsetting the poor center and the Popocatepetl pass was sent to the garage for the day.

About this "F.W.D.", the Marion juggernaut was jolted slightly on the windshield and hit on only three and a half for a few seconds. However several mechanics on the Marion team soon brought the old boat around in good running order and the old juggernaut continued to juggle down the field.

Clay attempted a forward pass and young Master Martin Brown, thinking that the ball was not quite in the right position on the field, dashed in to get a better view of the state of things, intercepted the forward pass and ran almost as fast as he could down the field for a touchdown. It was at this time that Red and Black ribbons began to drift over the green before the cold October wind that knows no sympathy. Blue and White colors continued to shine brighter from this stage of the game to the conclusion.

A football team and an army are similar in many ways. Teamwork is the essential in the manoeuvres of both and if either would win success certain rules must be obeyed explicitly. On the attack the individual player or soldier must go wherever the command states and in the defense certain rules must be followed. And prior to all this a football team or an army must be well trained. In this training discipline figures strongest. The commander in the training camp and the football coach must be obeyed, must be absolute in their respective rule. In our little old army when a man disobeyed the orders of a superior officer he went up for summary, special or general, according to the offense, and at this court-martial he faced a semicircle of grave faced gentlemen with bars on their shoulders and took what they gave, being glad to get as little as possible. Petitions from his well-meaning friends had no effect whatever upon the court-martial and his aforesaid friends knowing that much in advance never presented the said petition. It is the same thing with a successful football team. Insubordination is the greatest menace to both an army and a football team. The innocent bystanders should take

CONFERENCE OF EPWORTH LEAGUES HERE LAST WEEK

The Henderson Conference of Epworth Leagues was held with the Marion Epworth League last Friday and Saturday. It was said to have been one of the most enjoyable and most profitable conferences ever held in the district. Every League in the Henderson District was represented by one or more delegates.

Rev. W. I. Munday of Louisville, President of the Louisville Conference of Epworth Leagues, was present and conducted the Institute part of the meeting. Rev. Munday has for a number of years been a loyal leaguer and is thoroughly familiar with every phase of league work. His work was an inspiration to every leaguer present. Friday night at seven o'clock Rev. Munday delivered an address on the subject "Know Christ".

The meeting Friday night was presided over by Hollis C. Franklin, treasurer of the Louisville Epworth League Conference. After the address, a social hour and program, consisting of games, good eats, etc., was given by the Marion Leaguers to the visiting delegates. One of the most enjoyable features of the social hour was the football contest, consisting of four teams, captained by Rev. W. P. Gordon, formerly pastor at Marion, now pastor at Clay; Rev. W. I. Munday, Rev. Murrill, pastor at Sturgis and Rev. Hickerson, pastor at Providence. Prof. O. M. Shelby was official timekeeper and referee of the ball games.

The program Saturday morning was given largely to Institute work with splendid addresses by Miss Clara Nunn and Rev. G. P. Dillon. The Conference was in charge of Miss Frances Cooper of Smith Mills, District Secretary of the Henderson District.

HALLOWEEN PARTY

On the evening of the 31st, the witches and ghosts will entertain at Seminary schoolhouse for the benefit of the school. Refreshments will be for sale. A good time for every body. Come.

the decision of the court-martial of the football coach in a calm manner and show no affected demonstration, for demonstrations by the public have been known to cause the downfall of nations as well as football teams. The fans of Marion will take the decision of the football coach in the proper spirit because Marion has been waiting—lo, these many years for a winning football team.

One of the members of the Blue and White football squad is enjoying an indefinite relaxation from the strenuous exercise of training and discipline.

Now we have a shining light for a few comparisons. There is a certain other young man on the squad who was as sure of a regular place on the team as any member of the squad. He was declared ineligible in the first week of practice. Did he do the o'possum act and cut off social relations with the squad? He did not! He could be found down there each day thereafter, following the team up and down the field. When discord threatened, he was among the first to council sane action on the part of the insurgents. It surely began to appear useless for him to stay with the team because games were being played regularly and he could always be found on the sidelines, never in the game. But still he remained loyal. Then he got a chance to play in part of a game. It was noticed that the enemy made no considerable gain through his sector. His loyalty had stood the test of tests and Marion is surely proud of him.

Yea, verily, foot-ball teams and armies are similar in many respects.

WILL BOOST HOME PAPERS

Week of November 7-12 Set for Nation-Wide Endeavor

"Subscribe to your home town paper."

This is the slogan of a new nationwide movement backed by the National Editorial Association and other agencies.

The movement has back of it far more than a selfish desire on the part of newspapers to acquire increased circulation, for it is, in effect, a step toward the perfect unification of America by the strengthening of ties that bind everyone to his native soil.

The campaign is, moreover, an excellent opportunity to boost the home town. The men and women who were born and reared here have, some of them, been away for many years and many important changes have taken place—changes in which they would be greatly interested. It is more often the case than not that private correspondence overlooks these changes, however carefully one might attempt to write the news in a letter.

The newspaper, on the other hand, prints all the items of interest, large and small, and is the ideal medium through which to keep in touch with the old home town.

"Subscribe to your home town paper."

The Qualen Concert Company will give an entertainment at the School Auditorium this evening, Friday, October 28. The concert is one of the numbers of a Lyceum course which is to be presented here this winter under the auspices of the Senior Class.

This sketch is filled with humor and alone is well worth the price of admission which is 35 and 50c. ## Basket-Ball

Girls Lose Hard Fought Game
To Clay by Very Narrow Margin

The Marion High School girls basketball team lost the game at Clay Saturday by a small margin. The final count stood 19 to 16 in favor of Clay. The girls started off with the pep and team work which have marked their past games of this season and scored five points before Clay hardly realized the game had started. However the crimson clad bunch came right back at them and scored three points before the quarter was up. The first quarter ended with the score Marion 5; Clay 3.

Beginning with the second quarter and continuing throughout the remainder of the contest the lead saw-sawed from one team to the other. Near the end of the game Clay gained a lead of three points which the Blue and White could not overcome.

The most noticeable part of the game was the readiness of both teams to foul. Most of the tallies were piled up by foul goals. The Marion guards had too great a tendency to leave their forwards unprotected with disastrous results.

The Clay center was quite a bit taller than "Tip" but the latter was every inch her equal when it came to real basket-ball ability.

The most striking difference between the two teams was the goal-shooting. Marion had more chances at the goal than Clay but our forwards seemed unable to get the range.

The line-up for Marion: Doss and Moore, forwards; Lowry, center; Hughes and Birchfield, guards.

Col. Byrd M. Guess, of Fredonia, was in Marion Friday of last week on business.

POPULAR YOUNG LADY

Funeral services were held at Sugar Grove Saturday, conducted by Rev. Emmett R. Ramer, of Princeton.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

JUDGE HENDERSON'S RECORD

In a recent newspaper advertisement, signed by the Republican Campaign Committee, it was stated that Judge Carl Henderson's record of affirmations in the Court of Appeals was above the average—that he had saved the taxpayers money by holding court only eight or ten days instead of four weeks, at Madisonville, giving prompt trials, etc.

The records show that Judge Carl Henderson has been reversed in more than one-half the cases taken on appeal from his court to the Court of Appeals, actually 38 out of every 60 cases appealed.

Can the Republican Committee show the record of a single Circuit Judge in Kentucky whose reversals make such a bad showing as that of Judge Henderson before the Court of Appeals?

The Republican Committee has claimed in its advertisement in the newspapers that Judge Henderson had saved the taxpayers money by the way he has operated the court.

On this proposition every voter has all the proof in his own possession. Get out your tax receipts!

If Judge Henderson has saved the tax-payers any money, then your taxes ought to be less than they were. Look at your tax receipts! See whether Judge Henderson has saved you any money. Every voter knows the taxes have grown heavier instead of less.

THE N. E. A. OPPOSED TO AN APPOINTIVE SUPERINTENDENT

The Louisville newspapers are quoting with great eclat a number of prominent State educators as in favor of the proposed Constitutional Amendment to make the State Superintendent of Public Instruction appointive instead of elective.

If these papers would go further into this matter they would find that the National Educational Association, the head of all the educational forces in this country, has always opposed an appointive State Superintendent of the States.

The argument has been used at the Conventions of the National Educational Association that the States which have adopted the appointive plan for naming State Superintendents are the least progressive in educational matters of all the states.

Educators from the Middle and far West, where the most progress is made in educational matters, are all violently opposed to an appointive State Superintendent.

It has been repeatedly argued in these national conventions that any divorcement of the people from the head of the school system would be both hurtful to the character of men who are selected for this position, and also would help destroy public interest in the schools.

Resolutions favoring a change of the office from an elective to an appointive one have invariably been defeated.—Elizabethtown (Ky.) News

Marion has over fifty places of business in her corporate limits, not mentioning the professional business.

These represent a vast sum of money and a large volume of business—and less than 100 inches of space is used this week in the only paper published in the county, to let the people know what is here for sale. Other county seats around us advertise their wares in their county papers, but Marion does very little. Yet they all say it pays to advertise and they believe in it.

LOSES FOOT IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Thursday morning of last week an automobile accident occurred on South Main Street, in which Hally Wilcox, colored, of this city was seriously but not fatally injured.

Wilcox was riding on the fender of T. C. Bennett's car, driven by Walter Fritts who was driving close behind the car of Carl Henderson. As they neared the top of the hill on South Main, the cars met. Fannie Belmeier in his "Lizzie." The dust was so dense that the second car and Mr. Belmeier's crashed in which the negro was injured.

Wilcox was taken to the hospital at Paducah Thursday afternoon where his foot was amputated.

Creed Threlkeld left Monday for Clay where he has accepted a position as manager of the Home telephone company.

Farm Bureau Notes

Clean Straw Important in Mulching Strawberries

Strawberry growers who wish to keep their plant beds clean and free from weeds will do well to avoid the use of unclean straw in mulching this fall, specialists on the crop say. Wheat straws best provided it is free of grain kernels since these will sprout in the spring and cause extra labor in cleaning out the bed. The straw should be placed from 4 to 6 inches deep on the plants, according to N. R. Elliot, of the College of Agriculture. Mulching should not be done until the first freeze in order that insects may be prevented from hiding in the straw and infesting the plants the following spring and summer.

Mulching of the beds is practiced to conserve moisture, keep down weeds and keep dirt of the berries during the following season. Best results can be accomplished only when the practice is carefully followed, the specialists say.

Agricultural Movies

During the week of November 7 to 12 the Crittenden County farmers will be given an opportunity to see the farmers picture "Out of the Shadows." The picture deals with tuberculosis eradication work and shows its importance. A story runs throughout the picture making it very interesting to young and old alike. Dr. T. P. Polk, Extension Veterinarian, will make a talk at each meeting. Watch for dates and places.

Tuberculin Testing

Dr. F. O. Schneider, Deputy State Veterinarian, in co-operation with County Agent Spencer, tested 316 animals on 15 different farms last week. Only two animals reacted and showed evidence of tuberculosis among the entire number. The safe thing to do is test your cattle then you are sure they are clean. There will be more work done at a later date and those desiring the test are urged to get in touch with the County Agent.

To All Poultry Raisers

During the spring of 1921 pure-bred hatching eggs of the breeds listed below were distributed to Kentucky farmers in furtherance of Poultry Standardization work in the state. The eggs were distributed on the plan of one pullet returned for each setting of eggs taken. These are the pullets listed for auction at this time. These pullets were hatched prior to May 15 and have been raised on free range. The hatching eggs were secured from pure bred flocks that had been rigidly culled on the basis of egg production. The pullets in most cases will be auctioned in groups of 6 or 12. The pullets will be graded in two grades. Grade 1 should sell between $1.50 to $2.00 and grade 2 from 1.00 to $1.50. A cockerel may be secured with the group of 12.

This offers an excellent opportunity to secure pure bred utility farm stock. You have the opportunity of securing pullets from four breeds but please remember that Crittenden county is listed by the Experiment Station as a Wyandotte county.

For further information see the County Agent.

J. A. RUDY AND SONS

This is one of the leading department stores in western Kentucky and is located in Paducah. They carry a high class line of merchandise and quote very reasonable prices. This firm is bidding for the trade of shoppers of this end of the state. They are expecting the rock roads leading to Paducah to bring many shoppers to that city.

And they are wise. Merchants in other towns are going to see their trade going to Paducah and to Rudy's. Why? Because Rudy and Sons are advertising extensively throughout this section of the state. They are going to get patronage and they deserve it.

The Marion High School eleven goes to Greenville Saturday to meet the Greenville boys on the gridiron.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Young Carlisle Wilburton Dale, or "Bill Dale," as he is known, son of a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idle ease and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clavering, at the altar. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountain girl. "Babe" is a character of the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his clan, which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlisle. Moreland's description of "Carlisle" causes Dale to believe the man was his father.

CHAPTER II.—Dale arranges to make his home with the Moreland family, for whom he entertains a deep respect.

CHAPTER III.—Talking with "Babe" Littleford next day, Dale is ordered by "Black Adam" Ball, bully of the district, to leave "his girl" alone. Dale replies spiritedly, and they fight. Dale whips the bully, though badly used up. He arranges with John Moreland to develop Dale's coal deposits. Ben Littleford sends a challenge to John Moreland to meet him with his followers next day, in battle. Moreland agrees.

Babe Littleford was standing in the water to her knees. When Dale succumbed to utter exhaustion, she started toward him, to save him from drowning. She felt strangely drawn toward the big, white, clean man who had whipped the Goliath she had always dreaded. But she had gone only a few yards toward the center of the river when John Moreland and Sam Heck reached the unconscious figure.

Heck dragged Ball to the Littleford bank and left him lying there, face downward, on the sand. Moreland half carried, half dragged Bill Dale to the other bank. Babe Littleford waded out. She paid absolutely no attention to the worsted bully. She stood intently watching the limp form of Dale. "Is he dead, John Moreland?" she called tremulously.

"No, Babe," Moreland answered, his voice not unkind; "he ain't anyways nigh dead."

He and Sam Heck took up Dale's dripping figure and bore it away. Babe Littleford ran to higher ground, hid herself behind a clump of sassafras and watched them.

Granny Heck followed with Dale's coat and hat. She chattered all the way across the meadow—

"Now what did I tell ye, John and Sam? What did I tell ye? La, la! Wasn't it a master fight, like I said—now wasn't it?"

"Sometimes ye make me a little tired, granny-woman," Moreland remonstrated gently. "The ain't nothin' in fortune-tellin'. You've just been here for so long 'at you know how to judge the future by the past. And you're a to'able good guesser, too, I reckon."

Granny Heck stared up quickly: "Ain't nothin' in fortune-tellin'! Now don't go and fool yerself, John Moreland. You listen to me about a half minute, John. I seed more in the cup 'as I told Mr. Bill. I seed blood and death. I seed a big fight atwixt the Morelands and the Littlefords!"

"That's easy to guess at," John Moreland replied. "You know, o' course, 'at Black Adam will do 'ill he can to bring trouble to us on account o' Bill Dale a-stayin' with us. And you know it ain't never possible to hatch up war atween us and the Littlefords. Jest run on ahead, Granny Heck, and tell my wife to hunt up some kind o' good liniment for Bill's bruises. Tell her she needn't to waste time a-lookin' up any bandages. This man here is like me; he wouldn't wear bandages, 'cause they look bad."

When Dale came back to a state of consciousness, he was lying under covers in the carved black walnut bed. Beside him stood John Moreland, who held in one hand a bowl containing a hot herb brew that his wife had prepared. Granny Heck, her son By, and Mrs. Moreland stood not far away.

"This here'll be good for ye, I think," said Moreland, nodding toward the bowl in his hand. He went over and put an arm around Dale's shoulders and helped him to sit up.

Dale drank the stuff with difficulty. "Much obliged," he muttered thickly. "I—let's see, did I whip—how did it end? He didn't lick me, did he—that fellow Ball?"

"He shore didn't," smiled Moreland. "Not by a big sight. He fell out fast. His own pap won't hardly know him, Bill!"

News travels rapidly in the big hills. The Morelands began to gather at the home of their chief to see the man who had whipped Black Adam Ball; every Moreland able to walk came to see Bill Dale. For three hours he was fawned, but he didn't enjoy it; the water had left many pains in his chest, and his head ached dully, and his hands still felt as though the bones were shattered in them.

Came a thundershower that afternoon, and the mountain evening fell with a chill. A fire was made in the wide stone fireplace in the guest's room, and when supper was over the family gathered there with Dale, who refused to be kept in bed.

After a few minutes of silently watching grotesque shadows flit across the log walls, Dale said to John Moreland:

"If your brother David could know, don't you think he'd want you to get the value out of the coal?"

John Moreland bent forward to rest his chin in his hands. His sober grey eyes stared thoughtfully toward the fire.

"I ain't never looked at it that way," he said.

"That's the right way to look at it," declared Dale. "But you shouldn't sell the property as it is."

The mountaineer turned an inquiring face toward his guest.

"How in thunder could I handle it ef I didn't?"

"Why not let me develop it for you?" Dale said earnestly, eagerly. "I won't charge you anything above expenses, and I won't be extravagant."

"I'd take considerable money to start things a-movin'. Have you got it?" asked Moreland.

"No, but I can get it. Almost anybody would be willing to lend money on so good a thing as this, y'know."

For a little while Moreland sat there and looked squarely at Dale, who returned his gaze without a sign of flinching. The hillman was trying to find a motive.

"How comes it 'at you, who ain't knowed us but two days," he demanded, "can be so much interested in us?"

The question demanded a straightforward answer. Dale realized that there was but one way in which he could give a satisfactory explanation, and that that was by telling the truth—but not the whole truth, as he surmised it, for then his efforts would go for naught.

Moreland was speaking again, and his eyes were brighter now.

"I agree 'at David would want us to develop the coal, ef he could know. It's like a light a-breakin' to me. But that coal is sacred to us, Bill Dale, and afore ye go any further I'll haf to ax ye to tell me all about yerself. A city man up here in the wilderness—it don't look sp'ecious, Bill, mebbe, but—well, I hopes ye can pardon me for axin' it. I shore got to be keeful about Brother David's coal. Addie and the boys'll go out and leave jest us two in here; and when ye're a-talkin' to me it's the same as talkin' to a tombstone so fer as tellin' is concerned. Addie, honey; Luke, you and Cale—"

Mrs. Moreland and her sons arose and left the room, closing the door behind them. Bill Dale paced the floor, arms folded, brows drawn. Finally he faltered before the Moreland chief.

"There's nothing I'm ashamed of, I guess," he said. "I don't like to tell it simply because I don't like to tell it. But—I'll do it."

He sat down in his sheepskin-lined rocker, lay back and closed his eyes as though to visualize the story, to live it over.

"Maybe it's not very much in my favor, John Moreland," he began. "I never could get along with my parents, or with the set I was born into. Somehow, I was different. Father and mother wanted me to be a dandy; they even wanted me to be a servant dress me. The climax came when they tried to marry me to a young woman who didn't want me any more than I wanted her."

He opened his eyes, looked straight at Moreland, and went on:

"You see, they wanted to marry us in order to unite old Clavering's forward answer. Dale realized that there was but one way in which he could give a satisfactory explanation, and that that was by telling the truth—but not the whole truth, as he surmised it, for then his efforts would go for naught.

He opened his eyes, looked straight at Moreland, and went on:

"You see, they wanted to marry us in order to unite old Clavering's for-wanted Pat's cousin, 'poor dear Harry' Clavering, for my best man. 'Poor dear Harry' and I had a fight, once upon a time, and I—I had whipped him; and I didn't like him. I chose Bobby McLaurin for my best man, and I wouldn't give him up.

"It was only when we met before the chance in a big crowded church that I fully realized the tragedy of it for Pat. I saw that her face was a clean white, and that her eyes held the shadow of something that was very terrible. I turned my head and saw the same shadow in the eyes of my greatest friend, Bobby McLaurin. I knew then. Bobby and Patricia loved each other, John Moreland! Bobby didn't have any money to speak of, and that had held them apart.

"It had been the finest thing in the world, McLaurin's acting as best man for me. There was friendship for you! I couldn't take from them their one chance of happiness. . . .

"I couldn't see anything else to do, so I ran. I went home, pulled off my wedding rig and put on the clothes I'm wearing now, threw some things into a bag and hurried down to the union station. I found that I could have my choice between a flier for Atlanta and the—the train that brought me here. I bought passage to Atlanta, but I never meant to use it; I meant to take the other train and pay a cash fare. In doing that, I hoped to lose myself from them. I wanted to go unhindered to some country where I wouldn't be considered—a savage, y'know.

"I went out to the train-shed, and I hadn't been there a minute when Bobby McLaurin came. I asked him how he knew where to find me. He said:

"I thought you wouldn't care to stay here after doing what you did, and I wanted to say good-by, Bill. He always called me that, and it made me feel like a man. Then I put my bag down and took him by both shoulders and told him this:

"Look here, Bobby, I'm going to give you some advice, and you take it. You steal Pat and marry her. Steal Pat and marry her if you have to live in a hole in a hillside. You're as good as any of them, and lots better than most of them. You can work your way to a better salary. You see, I told him, 'we get about what we deserve in this world. Most of us don't deserve much.'

"I asked him if mother was badly cut up. He said she was; that she had fainted. Dad swore aloud, he said, there in church. I told Bobby good-by and got aboard the train without saying anything about where I was going—but I didn't know myself where I was going, at the time.

"Now you've heard it. Every word was truth. If you'll trust me with the coal, I'll make this land my land, your people my people. I'll suffer with you when you suffer, and be happy with you when you're happy; and when you fight, I'll fight with you."

The Moreland chief arose, and Bill Dale arose. The hillman put out his hand, and Dale gripped it.

"I believe in ye, Bill," said John Moreland. "Fo' another thing, I've seed ye fight. You can work the coal."

He looked toward the closed inner door and called, "Oh, Addie; you and the boys can come back now."

Out of the night a face appeared at one of the small windows. It was a feminine face and handsome rather than pretty. Two slender, sunburned hands gripped the window-ledge nervously. The face pressed closer to the glass, then disappeared. Soon afterward the outer door of the guest's room opened, and Ben Littleford's daughter entered. Her skirts were dripping wet.

Mrs. Moreland arose and went toward the young woman. She knew that only something of great importance could bring a Littleford into her home in this fashion.

"What's the matter, Babe?" Babe Littleford gave no attention to Mrs. Moreland. She went on to Bill Dale, walking softly on bare feet.

"Black Adam is a-goin' to kill you tonight, Bill Dale."

"That so?" Dale's smile was rather grim. "How did you find that out, Miss Littleford?"

"I found it out, all right. As he went off from the river this mornin', I made fun of him; and he patted the stock of his rifle and said he'd git you through a window! He was at our house this evenin' to help fix pap's gun, and when he left he started this way, a-goin' by the blowed-down sycamore. I waded the river at Blue Cat shoals to beat him here. I thought you might want to know about it, so's ye could mebbe save other folks the trouble o' makin' a funeral for ye."

She backed toward the door, her eyes never leaving Dale's face. Another second, and she was gone.

They were all on their feet now. John Moreland gripped Dale's arm.

"Over thar aside o' the chimney, Bill!" he ordered, his native drawl for the moment absent. "Out, Addie, honey! Luke, bring my rifle and hat—jump keen! Cale, bring water and drownd this here fire!"

It was done. Moreland took his hat and the repeater and went alone into the night.

When some fifteen minutes had passed, there came to Dale's ears the sound of shooting. There were ten shots in such rapid succession that they made almost a continuous roar. Then came echoes and reverberations, and then silence. Soon John Moreland let himself into the dark room.

His wife's voice was low and filled with anxiety:

"What happened, John?" A dull thud came through the darkness as her husband's rifle-butt struck the floor.

"This is what happened, Addie: As I gassed the lawner o' the house, I get-down that thar old oxwhip to take along. I went across the road and into the meadow, and thar I seen Adam Ball a-comin'. I hid, and when Adam was about to pass me, I jumped up and jerked his rifle from him and busted it ag'in a rock. Then I lights in and thrashes him with the oxwhip ontel he broke and run. So I up and tells him to show me how fast he can run and commences a-shootin' over his head to skeer him. But it didn't happen to be Adam Ball—it was Ben Littleford! He was a-fellerin' 'Babe' to see what she was up to, o' course."

"How do ye know it was Ben, pap?" Caleb asked.

"How do I know?" growled John Moreland. "When I get through a-shootin' toward me and says: 'Tomorrow, John Moreland,' he says, 'we'll have a little Gettysburg o' our own!' And I might mind ye, Cale, 'at he keeps his word the same as I do."

HOME-COOKED POTATO CHIPS ARE GREATLY RELISHED AT ANY MEAL

Wire Basket of Some Kind Is Essential for Frying Potato Chips.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Everybody likes good potato chips. Their salty crispness makes them an enjoyable addition to the luncheon or dinner menu and provides a variation in the customary methods of serving potatoes at home. Their food value is high and they offer a valuable part of last year's large potato crop.

Not all potatoes make good chips, say food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the excellence of the finished product depends on the materials used and the care exercised in their preparation. New potatoes in the spring or early summer do not make good chips. They should not be used before the skin sets. A waxy or soggy potato is not good chip material. Select a variety that becomes mealy when baked or boiled.

Round Potatoes Are Best.

Although the size and shape of the potato do not affect its cooking quality, they do influence the quantity and appearance of the chips. Round potatoes are better than long ones, as there is less waste in peeling, especially if a vegetable peeler is used. Deep eyes are objectionable because of the difficulty of paring and the waste involved, and because they make ragged-looking slices. The equipment necessary is simple and inexpensive. Some form of a vegetable slicer is essential, as it is impossible to slice the peeled potatoes thin and even enough by hand. The slices should be one-sixteenth inch thick and should be even, if they are to cook uniformly. The best vessel in which to fry the chips is one that is deep rather than wide, with a perforated basket in which the chips can be lowered and raised.

Potato chips may be fried in a variety of fats, but for a number of reasons the vegetable fats are preferable to the animal fats. Whatever fat may be selected, it must be in good condition, i. e., light-colored and free from all objectionable odors and flavors.

Peel large, smooth Irish potatoes, removing all eyes and diseased spots. Slice as described above. Soak slices in cold water for at least an hour, changing the water frequently until it is entirely free from starch. Where running water is available, letting cold water run over the chips for an hour is preferable to soaking in standing water. Heat a high-grade of vegetable cooking oil to a little below smoking point (210 degrees C. or 410 degrees F. if you have a thermometer).

Slices Should Be Dried.

The kettle should not be much more than half full of oil, otherwise the water on the potatoes will sputter and boil over when dropped into the hot fat. The moisture on the slices must be evaporated before the potatoes can brown; it also lowers very appreciably the temperature of the fat. Therefore shake the soaked slices as dry as possible. When making chips in small quantities, it is possible to partially dry the slices between towels before placing them in the basket and lowering into the oil. Do not cook too many at a time, or they will curl into little balls. Stir constantly. They will cook quickly, the time required varying with the size of the kettle and the quantity of the oil and potatoes used. Three to five minutes is a good average.

When the chips are light golden brown, raise the basket, drain off the surplus oil and empty them on clean brown paper. Sprinkle lightly with salt. If fresh sweet oil is used and care is taken to store the chips in a cool, dry, clean place, they should keep without spoiling for several weeks. Place them in the oven for a few minutes before serving to make them crisp.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Kate T. Reid, (Nee Martin) died last Thursday evening at her home in Fredonia, Ky.

Mrs. Reid was born in the Caldwell Springs neighborhood September 10, 1863, at the time of her death she was 58 years 1 month and three days old.

At an early age she joined the Caldwell Springs Baptist church and has lived a true Christian life ever since. She was loved by all who knew her.

The deceased was married to Geo. W. Reid, in 1881 and to this union seven children were born, all of whom survive the mother, they are Mrs. Verna Dearing of Harriman, Tenn., C. Clay Reid of Duquoin, Ill., Mrs. Clara Mae Jones, of Sheridan, Ark., Mrs. Hugh Driver of Marion, Ky., William E. Reid of Duquoin, Ill., and Elizabeth Reid of Fredonia. She also leaves ten grandchildren and a host of friends.

Mrs. Reid has been in delicate health for several years and her death was expected at any time. All the above named children were at home when the mother died. The funeral services were conducted at the Baptist church at 2:30 P. M. Friday October 14th by Rev. Lilly, assisted by Rev. Whitehouse, pastor of the Christian church of Princeton, Mr. Robert Morgan of Princeton and Mr. Maxwell of Fredonia having charge of the funeral.

She was buried in the Fredonia cemetery. A host of friends followed her to her last resting place.

IN MEMORIAM

On October 14, 1921 Miss Naomi Paris was called to her Heavenly reward. She was born April 20, 1902. Several years ago she professed faith in Christ and became a member of South Side Baptist church, Covington, Ky. She had been suffering for many months and we would not think of calling her back if we could to endure the sorrows and tribulations of this life, when we know that she is happy and free from earth's ills. Just before going she sang the words over and over "The angels are singing." We might inquire why was one taken with life just begun and prospects so bright but the answer from the All Compassionate One comes to the bleeding soul "Peace be still".

Some day we will read the meaning of our tears and understand the Savior's meaning when he said "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter." The funeral services were held in

Vote For The People's Judge Hon. Carl Henderson

He has dispatched the business of the Court in Crittenden County in a third of the term, thus reducing it from three weeks to four days or less.

He has saved tens of thousands of dollars of the people's money in jury and witness fees.

He has saved an untold amount of the people's time in getting cases tried promptly; witnesses stay one day instead of four or five; jurors stay 2 or 3 days instead of 12 or 18; and all because Judge Henderson thinks more of the rights of the people than he does of the delays of the lawyers.

He is fair, impartial, upright, able and fearless.

He enforces all the laws all the time. His record for affirmances by the Court of Appeals is above the average of Circuit Judges of the state.

Regardless of politics, the sensible thing for you to do is—

WAYS FOR UTILIZING LEFT-OVER CEREALS

Housekeeper Can Make Good Use of All Remnants.

Splendid for Making Scalloped Dishes, Souffles and Omelets, in Making Muffins and in Various Other Ways.

What can be done with the cupful of cooked cereal left from breakfast? The economical housekeeper dislikes to throw it out, but how can she use it so that her family will like its second appearance at the family board? The following solutions of the problem are offered by the home economics specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Remnants of cereal breakfast foods may often be utilized in making scalloped dishes, souffles, and omelets, in thickening soups or gravies, in making muffins and griddle cakes, and in many other ways. Also they can sometimes be reheated or thinned and added to a new supply. The practice of frying the left-overs of boiled hominy or of cornmeal mush is as old as the settlement of this country, and the nursery song about the "bag pudding the queen did make" from King Arthur's barley meal shows us that for centuries other cereal puddings have been treated in the same way. In so-called "oatmeal, oysters" small portions of the left-over cereal are dipped in eggs and crumbs and fried. The use of left-over rice and other cereals in croquettes, puddings, etc., is well known.

Cold cooked farina or similar cereal may be utilized in the following way:

Farina Pudding.

1 cupful cold, cooked 1/2 cupful seeded farina. 1 tablespoonful corn-starch. 1 egg. 1 cupful milk. 1-2 cupful sugar.

Bake in a medium oven until brown, or heat on top of the stove. Dried figs or dates or stewed fruit may be substituted for the raisins.

Boiled rice and pearl barley are offen used in soup, and there is no reason why small quantities of coarse samp or any other cereal which will keep its shape fairly well should not be used up in the same way. Similarly, remnants of macaroni broken into small pieces may be used in the place of vermicelli or other special soup pastes. Such practices serve the double purpose of using material that would otherwise be wasted and of giving a little variety to a simple diet by inexpensive means.

Oatmeal cookies, a toothsome and wholesome sweet for the school lunch, may be made of one egg, one-third cupful granulated sugar, one cupful rolled oats, two teaspoonfuls melted fat, one teaspoonful salt. Beat the egg, add sugar gradually, and stir in other ingredients. Drop a spoonful at a time on a well-greased tin and bake in a moderate oven.

SPLENDID DISH FOR SUPPER

Combination of Eggs and Cheese Is Recommended by Department of Agriculture.

The combination of eggs and cheese makes a hearty dish suitable for supper, dinner or lunch. The following recipe is recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture:

4 eggs. 1 cup, or 4 ounces, stale bread crumbs. 1 cup, or 4 ounces, 1/2 teaspoon salt. 1 cup, or 4 ounces, 1/2 cup grated cheese. A few grains of 1 cup of fine, soft Cayenne pepper.

Break the eggs into a buttered baking dish or into ramekins and cook in a hot oven until they begin to turn white around the edge. Cover with the mixture of crumbs, cheese and seasonings. Brown in a very hot oven. In preparing this dish it is essential that the oven be very hot or the egg will be too much cooked by the time the cheese is brown. To avoid this, some cooks cover the eggs with white sauce before adding crumbs.

The food value of the dish is very close to that of a pound of beef of average composition. For those who are particularly fond of cheese, the amount of cheese in this recipe may be very much increased, thus making a much more nourishing dish; or the amount may be reduced so as to give hardly more than a suggestion of the flavor of cheese.

the home. After a brief service by the writer the body was laid to rest in Highland Cemetery there to await the resurrection morn.

She leaves a mother, father, brother and a host of friends and relatives to cherish her memory. One brother having passed to his eternal home more than three years ago.

May the Lord comfort all these loved ones bowed down beneath this weight of sorrow with all needed blessings is the prayer of her pastor.

A. H. ELLIS

THE PHILOSOPHER SAYS

The greatness of an egotist is in his I.

Luxuries of life are the things we don't really need.

He is a busy man who does half as much as he intends to do.

Look after your wife rather than after yourself—she will look after you.

If a boy's mother admits that he is a trifle wild, he must be pretty tough.

A woman can make a fool of almost any man, if nature hasn't got the start of her.

Success, as a rule, can be attributed to an intuitive knowledge of human nature.

The man who is the architect of his own character often puts up a job no other man would take off his hands.

Even the engagement ring is the outcome of a trust, and the wedding ring is the natural result of a combination.

It's always difficult to interest a man in the story of your former wealth when you want to borrow money of him.

Most of the things a woman does because she has no reason for doing them turn out better than the things a man does because he has several reasons for doing them.
